Hassan had spent many months growing a beautiful garden. One morning, to his horror, he saw that his cabbage bed was completely spoilt. His neighbour's hens stood in the middle of the patch scratching away all the soil. After shooing them away, he angrily marched next door. His neighbour, David, was known for his lazy habits. He promised to lock up the hens after listening to Hassan. However, David quickly forgot his promise and the hens kept entering the garden. Hassan decided to act before it was too late. He bought some eggs and placed them around his vegetable patch. When David walked past the patch next, he found Hassan picking up the eggs. Surprised, David asked, 'Where did these eggs come from? You own no hens.' Hassan replied. 'I am a lucky man. Every morning, your hens come into my garden and lay eggs here!' From that day onward, David's hens never disturbed Hassan again.

Rohit had developed bad habits due to the poor company he kept and his father could not wean him from his friends. So, he asked a wise old man to make him understand. The old man took him to a garden, and while walking, he asked the boy to pull out a tiny plant growing there. The boy pulled it out very easily. Next, he asked him to pull out a slightly bigger plant. With a little effort the boy could pull that out too. Now, the old man asked him to pull out a bush. The boy had to use all his strength to pull it out but eventually, he could. There was a mango tree. The old man, pointing to the tree, told the boy, 'Now pull that one out.' The boy tried very hard but the tree would not budge. The boy was out of breath and he started panting. At last, he gave up and said, 'It's impossible.' The wise old man said, 'It is same with old habits. When they are young, it is easy to pull them out, but when they take hold, they cannot be uprooted.' The boy understood what he meant and tried to give up his bad habits.
